Lyon is usually called the capital city of gastronomy. For a long time, this was equated with sauces and a petit-bourgeois small town complex. But then the TGV high speed train linked Lyon with Paris and Marseille. Olympique de Lyon started to win League Championship after League Championship, and a new Lyon was suddenly filled with daring architecture, crowded cafés and avant-garde exhibitions.

THE CITY

There is water everywhere, flowing under 28 bridges. Lyon is divided into different areas by two rivers, the Saône and Rhône, and two hills, La Croix-Rousse and Fourvière. In the west, by the Fourvière hill, is the bustling, historic city centre with its Renaissance pomp. It bears witness to the riches that the city's profitable silk industry earned, following François the First's tax reductions in 1536.

In 43 BC, the Romans founded the capital city of the Gallic provinces on a peninsula, at the foot of La Croix-Rousse and in the area around the Town Hall and the Opera, France's most prominent architects and artists were given a free hand in the 1990s. The result was Post-Modern glamour: a Rococo opera with a glass dome, a grand square with columns and 69 water jets.

From the Town Hall and the Opera, the main shopping, restaurant and café streets, the rue de la République and rue Président Herriot extend in a north-south direction. The Congress Centre with the 3,000 seat amphitheater built by Renzo Piano, the Contemporary Art Museum and Interpol sandwiched between the Rhône River and the Park de la Tête d'Or, are part of the business centre on the left bank of the river. The underground railway system is extensive - you seldom have to walk for more than 15 minutes.

DO & SEE

Photo: FaceMePLS

Dive in to culture, history, fashion and food! Whether you are here for a weekend or a week you will find things to do, it is easy to fall in love with Lyon.

Musée d'Art Contemporain

It is situated on the border of the Park de la Tête d'or, adjacent to the newly built Congress Center by Renzo Piano. It regularly beats Paris by gaining sole rights to any Andy Warhol exhibition! Next to the Museum, Renzo Piano's 3,000 seat amphitheater is worth a visit by itself. One of the most audacious architectural juxtapositions: business, arts and leisure activities all succeed in mingling together in the same living area.

DINING

Photo: FaceMePLS

Plunge into the small, picturesque, yet lively world of Lyon's traditional restaurants – the bouchons. Their menus display all the specialities from the local markets and the traditional Lyon dishes. Lyon is also the capital of gastronomy and grande cuisine. The uncontested master of French cuisine, Paul Bocuse, has his restaurant by the Saone. New chefs brimming over with creative cuisine talent are already in place so this place is a must! In Stendhal's "Memoirs of a Tourist," he wrote: "I know one thing that you do very well in Lyon, you can eat admirably there.”

Brasserie “Le Nord”

Monsieur Bocuse’s turn of the century bistro with all of Northern France’s classics on the menu: onion soup, calf brains, chicken fricassee. It also has a terrace where you can enjoy your lovely food.

CAFES

Photo: Cliff

A café is first and foremost something that is just there, waiting for the tired passer-by who happens to walk that way. And then whether it happens to be a grand square such as Place des Terreaux, Place Louis Pradel or just an alley in the Old City, is not so important. However, for those who don't just want to see – but also to be seen – there are, of course, a great number of addresses to go to.

Grand Café des Négociants

This is the place if you want to be sure that you are never in the wrong place. This is always right. Heavy curtains, exquisite plasterwork and mirrors everywhere for Lyons' silk merchants who wanted to be able to keep an eye on each other. A monument in Lyon. What the Café Flore is for Parisians.
