The Greeks and Romans did it, as did rich lords, film stars, artists and thousands of tourists. They were just going to pass by, but instead remained in Nice and along the Riviera. Some for just a few weeks, others for months and years. They were too captivated by the light, enchanted by the scents and charmed by the taste of olives, wine and succulent vegetables. All this with a chance to dabble their toes in a turquoise sea! In addition to this, a Nice Nouveau has evolved – a sassy Mediterranean metropolis with pulsating nightlife, new avant-garde hotels and daring art galleries. The most fashionable street, the Promenade des Anglais, is the Champs-Élysées of the whole Riviera. Have you already bought your return ticket?

THE CITY - NICE

If you arrive in Nice by air, you will get straight into the city's most beautiful avenue – the Promenade des Anglais – the Mediterranean's Champs-Élysées. The magnificent seaside promenade runs between the luxury hotels and the beach, all in the shade of the very typical feather duster palms. Roller skaters glide easily between sun chairs, limousines and beach restaurants. This is Nice's cosmetic face. The city's heart is a bit further away – by the Cours Saleya market square. The main artery is la rue Droite. Stroll around the maze of small streets in the old town, la Vieille Ville, you can turn off it into a tiny square here, a tiny alley there or a cool church beyond it.

Are you looking for shopping? You will find the shopping district above Place Masséna, where the big department stores and surrounding streets with names like rue Paradis and rue de la Liberté display their shops.

Most of the buses depart from Place Masséna, if you want to travel up into the hills above Nice. A number of fairly sleepy and well-heeled suburbs stretch from the Chagall museum to the inescapable Cimiez hills to the north. The hills are a must, both for the Matisse museum and the view, or just for a picnic in an olive grove, with or without the summer jazz festival. Eastern Nice is a bit more down-market and needs more local knowledge – apart from the area close to the harbour at Port Olympia. The nightlife there has been given a boost recently, ever since a low-cost cruise ship started to drop anchor at the port in the summer of 2005. To the east lies the billionaires' playground of Cap Ferrat, the Eagle's Nest of Eze and Beaulieu-sur-Mer, which has been there since antiquity. To the west, the road passes world-famous artist's colonies such as Saint-Paul de Vence.

DO & SEE - NICE

The whole world envies the French for their quality of life while the French envy the Riviera residents for their life in paradise. Nice combines the best of both worlds. This is where you can find small Provençal squares, where you can happily spend hours over a cup of coffee, but also find famous museums, parks and cathedrals. Put your walking shoes on!

Musée Matisse

Let's face it: you are not going to find any of Matisse's greatest works here. They are all in the USA. On the other hand, there is a clear picture of the artistic genius' development, from his sickbed as a young man to his grave behind the museum. After a visit, you can walk around in the painter's footsteps and compare the light in each painting. In addition, the red ochre villa is beautiful in its own right.

Russian Orthodox Cathedral

In the days of the tsars, the people who enjoyed themselves in the Riviera's casinos until late on Saturday night, were not exactly short of money. They went here, to church though, on Sundays. After the collapse of communism in Eastern Europe, things are much as they were in the old days, but thick wads of dollars now rain down on the Riviera - and the beautifully restored cathedral. Strict dress code.

EATING - NICE

Nice's cuisine is a reflection of the city's 300 days of sun a year. This means great tasting olive oil, garlic and lemons. Also a vast selection of all kinds of vegetables like aubergines, tomatoes, vegetable marrow, and lots more. If you put all this in a frying pan with olive oil, it makes ratatouille. Put it in the oven and you have a tian (au gratin). The city's own traditional take-away food is la socca – a kind of pancake made from chick peas. Some say it has a salty bracing taste, others say it tastes of old socks. However, this does not stop a new generation of playful chefs who have started to prepare Provençal cuisine nouveau. Bon appétit!

BARS & NIGHTLIFE - NICE

Riviera nights reflect influences from the Orient, Paris and Barcelona, all year round. The foundation of a good night out is the tiny bars and cafés that can escalate into a giant party before the night has ended. Nice is one of the real hot spots to party all year, just go with the flow and rhythm.

Most of Nice club scene is along cours Saleya, rue Droite and Place Masséna.

SHOPPING - NICE

Photo: Luca

Fashion, food and drinks are not pastimes in France – they are the foundations of life. The range of goods in the shops reflects the French elegance and awareness of trends. There is also a noticeable influence of nearby Italy showing in the smartly dressed people and beautiful shoes. A weekend passes quickly in Nice, and shopping can easily become a full day activity. So if you are in a hurry, it is advisable to concentrate on just a few streets.

Notre-Dame-Jean-Médecin-rue de Paradis

First take a walk along the avenue de Notre Dame. You can find some labels at bargain prices for children in places like Bisque-Bisque Ragle! At the Basilica, turn south along the avenue Jean-Médecin. This avenue cannot (and should not) be missed. This is where you will find many of the major brands like Zara - Spain's answer to H&M, Monoprix, Quick Silver and Virgin Megastore. In addition, there are a number of brasseries where you can take a break. Turn off onto the rue de la Liberté, (this is when the fashion thermometer starts to rise) and end up with the rue de la Liberté. This could be called Nirvana.

It is hotter than hot here – you should be able to find everything that makes French fashion what it is - Kenzo, Chanel, Mont Blanc...

End by going back to the Place Magenta and turn left onto the designer street, the rue Buffa, and visit, for example, Halogène at number 21.

Rue St-François de Paule-Préfecturerue - rue Droite

At rue St-François de Paule, you can revel in tasting Alziari's world-famous olive oil (n° 14). Or why not enjoy the fragrance of Bruno, the truffle king's black fungi (n°11)? Not to mention the sweets at Maison Auers (n°7)! Take a look at Nice's pulsing heart, the ProvProvençal- scented flower market (marché aux Fleurs), then turn eastwards along the rue de la Préfecture. Don't miss either the Antic Boutik or one of the other stylish fashion shops (Asso, Habit Magique...). If the Cours Saleya is Nice's heart, its main artery is the rue Droite. Walk along it. Look in on some of the many art galleries and souvenir shops, or stop and relax in a café.

Address: Vieux Nice
More Info: (Old Town)

Mamac- Gioffredo-Gubernatis - Masséna

After a visit to the Modern Museum (Mamac) and its souvenir shop, walk along rue Defly to rue Gioffredo. This houses an interesting range of everything from home furnishings to a milliner (n° 56). Take a peek at rue Gubernatis – if for no other reason than to stock up on wine bottles at nos. 16 and 17. If you still haven't found what you want, try the Galeries Lafayette department store.

SLEEPING - NICE

Photo: Giovanni

It is easy to spend a fortune on your hotel stay when in Nice, but you will find that there is also a myriad of accomodations, in all classes. Many of the low budget alternative has a rustic charm whilst the upper class suites has everything you'd expect suitable for kings and queens. Enjoy your stay, either way.

Hôtel Negresco

For your wedding night, unless you are one of the lucky people that can afford it anyway. The hotel was built in 1912 and was scheduled as a National Historic Monument in 1974. It is now one of the few palaces in the world that is still privately owned. The owner, Jeanne Augier, has created a museum to live in, with the aid of French works of art from the Renaissance to the present day.

Shopping - Saint-Tropez

Saint-Tropez offers great shopping with the greatest international brands, especially when it comes to summer fashion. The main luxury fashion companies have established themselves, one after the other, in this summer resort. You will find fashion brands like Louis Vuitton, Dolce & Gabbana and Dior.

Beachfront is where the main shopping scene is located; you will find small stores dotting the alleys around the harbour and chic boutiques on the beach. If you fancy high-end shopping, walk to Rue Gambetta for the designer names. Another great shopping street is Rue du General Allard that runs west from the port, a winding streets in the old town. This is where you will find a good mix of old and new, top designers and ordinary things.

Do not miss the popular open-air market at the Place des Lices, open on Tuesday and Saturday morning. It often attracts more than 100 stalls.

MONACO

Monaco is located between the South of France and Italy, right on the Mediterranean Ocean. Monaco is a country of monarchy with Prince Albert II as head of state.

The country is only about two squared kilometers in area, the world's second smallest state, but still boasts a population of over 30,000 people, making it the most populated country in the world. Monaco is made up of several areas; Monte Carlo, Monaco-Ville, La Condamine, Fontvieille and Larvotto Beach.

Monaco is recognized for its tax haven status and for its unique atmosphere of elegance and wealth. It is also well known for tourism as a playground for the rich and famous and with its most famous Monte Carlo Casino and museums with priceless art it is not difficult to understand why. The Formula 1 Grand Prix is another major part of Monaco, but it boasts many other exciting sport events and activities too.
